

2,000 attend Frankfort Centennial

100 Year Old Relics Displayed; Prizes Awarded

In a setting typical of the days when the first white men came to Frankfort township, the centennial of this township was celebrated in the pretty Frankfort Grove with its age old trees and spacious lawns, Sunday afternoon and evening when fully two thousand persons took part in the big 100th birthday observance.

Shortly after one o'clock people began to arrive at the grove and within a short time the centennial program was under way. A booth next to the dance pavilion housed a splendid collection of relics of the past.

Among some of the outstanding antiques displayed were the following: Collections of arrow heads, stone hatchets, etc., found in Frankfort township along the Hickory Creek bottom lands. Fields adjoining the creek still yield arrow heads. Two age old violins caused much attraction. One violin exhibited by John Martin of Mokena had the date 1746 pasted in the inside. Mr. Martin bought this violin at the time the household effects of the late Mrs. Julia Blaeser of Mokena were sold. It is said this violin had been in the Blaeser family many years and John Buch, well known fiddler of the early days, is said to have taken his first music lessons on this violin when a boy. Elmer Woodcock of Frankfort exhibited a Stradivarius bearing the date 1720.

August Schmeckpeper exhibited an interesting heirloom by way of a spinning wheel which has been in his family over 100 years. His grandmother used this spinning wheel in the early days.

Memories of long ago were refreshed by a framed advertising card showing a series of advertisements of Frankfort merchants and business houses of 60 years ago. A Will County atlas and history book also recalled old times. This book showed full page wood cut illustrations of farms and village homes in this section as well as other parts of Will County.

A wonderful collection of Indian relics was exhibited by Chester Story, Mrs. E. P. Krapp of Mokena, A. J. Eisenbrandt, Elmer Woodcock, Fred Warring and Jake Hestert of Frankfort.

Mrs. E. P. Krapp had a very interesting collection of Indian relics.

Orland Legion Post Has Successful Year; Elects New Officers

The Orland Park Legion Post under the able leadership of Commander W. R. Schussler, Jr., is closing a successful year. Altho the Post has only been in existence for 1 year, it has a membership of 39 members which compares favorably with the majority of the Posts in this district.

Much has been accomplished that does not appear on the surface. The Post has advanced to a point now where a great deal can be accomplished both for the membership and the community at large.

The Posts accepts with regret the decision of Commander Schussler to comply with the established custom of Legion Posts having their commander serve for one year only. Every member of the Post deeply appreciates the good services rendered by Commander Schussler in his office as commander.

At the last regular meeting of the Post the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Commander, Van Buren Knox
Adjutant, Lawrence L. Cahill
Finance Officer, Wm. Little
Senior Vice-Com. Herman Kruspe
Junior Vice-Com. Ray Doctor

MOKENA SEWER KNOCKED OUT BY JUDGE RUEL

Judge Henry F. Ruel of Kankakee handed down his second decision in the $70,000 Mokena sanitary sewer and sewerage treatment plant on Monday upholding the objectors as he did in his first decision last May. He sent the following order to Albin F. DeLander, county clerk of Will County:

"In the above matter you will please enter the following order: 'Objections to the petition sustained. Petition dismissed. Petitioner pray appeal to Supreme court. Appeal granted. Bill of exceptions 60 days.'

Judge Ruel's decision was as follows:

Attorneys for petitioner seriously contend, that, if the court is of the opinion that the improvement is unreasonable in so far as the lateral sewers in the subdivision in question are concerned, under the holding of the Supreme Court in the case of Municipal Engineering & Construction Co., vs. City of Chicago, 283 Ill., page 160, the court could properly hold that the construction of said lateral sewers in said streets devoid of any inhabitants thereon, at this time, is unreasonable, but that the construction of the sewage treatment plant and the outlet sewer is reasonable and order that all lateral sewers in such street be eliminated and the roll recast.

I have studied the language used by the court in that case, and I am of the opinion that the court did not intend to hold that a local improvement ordinance could be held valid in part and invalid in part. If that were true, then, a court could by its order amend an ordinance. In my opinion, the only body authorized to pass an ordinance or amend an ordinance is the legislative body of the municipality—in this case the Board of Trustees.

In this case if the court did as suggested by the attorneys for petitioner, that is, order the laterals in the streets in question eliminated then the court would be entering such an order, order the construction of an entirely different improvement than the one provided for by the ordinance.

In connection therewith I desire

He Can Do Old Time Steps Lively At Age of 94

Frederick Steinberg

Frederick Steinberg, aged 94 years and 9 months showed the old timers as well as the young folks at the Frankfort Centennial celebration last Sunday that he still can step off the old time dances with vigor.

He was born December 31, 1836 in Germany and came to this country in 1869 landing at the old Major Thompson farm near Joliet where Senator Richard Barr now lives. He worked for Major Thompson for two years. He recalls how they drove to Joliet in a lumber wagon with a spring seat. He attended the Lutheran church on Broadway, Joliet, five years later he bought a farm and paid $50 an acre. He borrowed some money in the Westpahl Bank in Joliet and paid 10 per cent interest every six months, so it was not so easy to free the land of debt. In those times the people couldn't spend their money so freely as now, but they were happy and contented.

Mr. Steinberg now makes his home with an adopted daughter, Mrs. Anna Knater. He is enjoying very good health, has good eyesight, reads his paper, smokes his pipe, eats well, sleeps well and works some every day. He mows the lawn, feeds chickens, saws wood and is able to shave himself with a safety razor twice a week. He never worries much and says that is what keeps him young.

Mokena Board Drops Big Sewer Project

Stormy Session Marks Death of $70,000 Deal

The stormiest village board meeting ever held in Mokena was held Wednesday night when a big body of angry property owners called the village board to task in connection with the sewer project which was ruled out the forepart of the week by Judge Henry F. Ruel.

The fireworks were set off when Mayor John C. Nielsen asked the village clerk to read the following letter from attorney Edward R. Nadelhoffer representing the sewer objectors, which letter had been addressed to the mayor:

"Mr. Snapp and I drove down to see the judge and we had quite an informal talk concerning the various plans and briefs, which have been sent to him by the village.

"In these plans they have proposed to cut the assessments less than one half in McIntosh's Addition and have even proposed to take out all lateral sewers in this addition, leaving an assessment against those lots for the outlet sewer and the sewage disposal plant, and have a judgment of confirmation in the full amount of the assessments against all the other property.

"We stated on our side, inasmuch as the ordinance provided for lateral sewers this provision of the ordinance could not be changed except by the passage of a new ordinance by the village and we have every reason to feel that we will receive favorable news within the next few days."

Mayor Nielsen asked each board member what he knew about this proposition and about the attempt to lower the assessment of the Rock Island from $1595 to $675 and each board member said he had no direct knowledge of the affair. Mayor Nielsen then declared that the board and the mayor should have been informed on this matter and then Mr. (continued page 5)

David Kolber Widely Known Mokena Man Dies

David Kolber, aged 61 years, well known business man, died at 12:30 Friday morning in the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet following an appendicitis operation. His sudden demise came as a great shock to his host of friends in Mokena and surrounding territory. During his twenty-nine years of business activity in Mokena, Mr. Kolber built up a fine business thru his straight forward dealing and integrity. He made and retained friends and as a symbol of respect to his memory, every business house in the village closed during the funeral hour Monday afternoon. The sympathy of the community goes out to his grief stricken widow and son.

Mr. Kolber first located in Mokena in 1902, opening a hardware store and tinshop in the building now occupied by the Sippel store. He came here from Solitt, Ill. Within a few years his business showed a decided expansion and kept growing until he had to have larger quarters and about twenty years ago he purchased the property he was located in at the time of his death.

Mr. Kolber was born in Austria on July 10, 1870. He immigrated to this country at the age of 18 years and has been a loyal citizen of his adopted country for 43 years and of Mokena for 29 years. He will be greatly missed by not only his immediate family, but by the community of which he was a part.

He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Matteson Lodge No. 175 of Joliet.

Surviving him are his widow, Anna Kolber, one son Leon of Mokena. Four brothers, Max and Sam of Montreal, Canada, Jake of Chicago, and Joe of Mokena, and two sisters, Mrs. Bertha Bald, and Mrs. Anna Schaeffer, both of Chicago, also survive.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the late home in Mokena, with the Masonic rites and concluded with services at the Jewish Federation Synagogue in Joliet. Interment took place in Mount Moriah Cemetery, Joliet.

Eastern Will Co. Farmers Want Game Protection

Farmers of Eastern Will County are thoroughly aroused over chicken stealing and ruthless hunting on the farms and highways by foreigners and other hunters. They are determined to protect what little game life there is left in this section and made their stand on this matter very emphatic at a big meeting held at the Green Garden town hall Friday night. They have perfected an organization for the protection of pheasants and will co-operate with the state Department of Conservation in a campaign of education until needed changes can be made in the state game laws restoring a closed season.

Hit and Run Driver Cause of Bad Smash

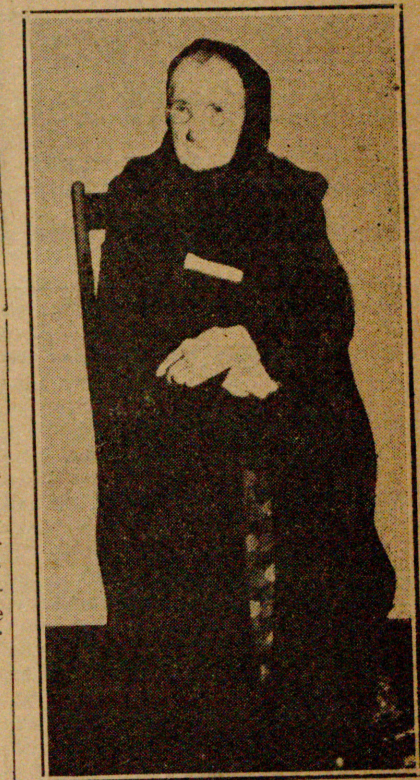

Three persons were injured in auto accident Thursday at the intersection of Wolf road and the Lincoln highway. All those hurt were Frankfort high school students.

Miss Florence Scheer, 16 years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scheer suffered a scalp laceration as well as many bruises. She was taken to the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet. An x-ray examination conducted by Dr. W. V. Hedges of Frankfort revealed no skull fracture, but many bruises.

The students were on their way home from school in a car driven by Stewart Zechlin. When the car was at the Wolf road intersection a car with three men in it coming from Mokena on the Wolf road turned on the Lincoln highway directly in the path of the Zechlin car. In order to avoid a head-on collision Mr. Zechlin turned out of the way as far as he could resulting in the car being upset in the ditch. The hit-and-run driver did not stop and drove away as rapidly as possible so his auto license number was not obtained.

Mr. Zechlin and Albert Krusemark, Jr., son of attorney A. H. Krusemark of Frankfort escaped injury. Robert and Clarence Klepper, the other occupants of the car suffered cuts about their heads.

Later he changed his mind and told the plaintiff it would be better to settle the matter peacefully, so the judge issued replevin papers and appointed Louis Nicolai special deputy and the furniture was removed without any further trouble.

LOOKING FOR THE TOWN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

He had motored from Kansas or Arizona or some place beyond the Mississippi and was eager to see for the first time the beauties of New England. Perhaps, he was one of those countless thousands, or millions possibly it has grown to be by this time, whose ancestors came over in the Mayflower and he was looking up the places where they first settled.

It was at Provincetown where he ran onto me out by the breakwater at the far end of the cape. He had come via Boston and had traversed the whole length of the narrow wobbling street along which the village is scattered.

"I wonder if you could help me out?" he inquired.
"Possibly, but not likely," I had modestly to admit.
"I'm looking for the town," he explained.

He had been from one end of Provincetown to the other, but he hadn't seen it. The old village, touched by his imagination, was something very different from actuality. He had missed it all as he was driving along. There are many of us who miss the town in other ways than did the Kansan when in reality it is all about us. I can, in a vague way, now realize how much of the beauty of the prairie I missed as a boy even when I was looking for beauty. I can see the knolls in spring now as I did not visualize them then, blue with violets and the lowlands in August brilliant with wild phlox. There were lilies—thousands of them—and goldenrods and yellow sunflowers, "rosin weeds" we called them, from the resinous gum which the sun melted out of their stems. I didn't see them, as I can well realize now, that while I was longing to see the beautiful things of the world here was a sight before me that I would travel many miles to see again. The town was about me, and I was looking for it.

Friendship and love and beauty—opportunity and happiness—how many of us pass along beside these things and miss them like the man in the midst of houses and yet looking for the town.

Early Pewter

Pewter ware, again in vogue, was first used early in the Eighteenth century. This grayish white metal is an alloy of tin and lead and sometimes a small quantity of copper or zinc is added. Builds Cozy Home of Driftwood From River

Man Borrows Rowboat to Tow Planks Ashore.

New Orleans, La.—Richard Burton, sixty-year-old unemployed machinist, has built one of the coolest little homes in New Orleans.

Three years ago, when Burton was "laid off" by the machine shop where he worked because he was "too old," he found a job as a night watchman on a large, idle steam shovel. The job paid $15 a week, $5 of which he paid for a room. A year ago his pay checks stopped and he faced the prospect of eviction from his home.

It was then that he decided to build a home. He went on the Mississippi river in a borrowed rowboat and towed planks and timber ashore for his home. He sold enough of the lumber to buy food and necessities.

Hoping that some day he will get paid for his services, he has stuck to his job of watching the large, rusting steam shovel each night. By day he works on his home.

It is almost finished and consists of two well-built rooms eight feet above the ground, so he need not fear the floods. He has sold surplus lumber salvaged from the river to buy nails, screens and hinges for the little house. He hopes to paint it soon.

"Everything has come from the river that went into the place," Burton said. Cypress for the foundation, oak for the flooring, pine for the walls and strong beams for the framework have been towed to the bank of the river, a few feet from his door.

U. S. Potatoes Save Million Chinese Handful Planted 25 Years Ago Relieve Famine.

Washington.—"The Biblical miracle of the loaves and the fishes was somewhat paralleled in real life during the recent famine in Kansu province, China," according to a communication to the National Geographic society from William W. Simpson, Tennessee missionary.

"A handful of potatoes sent from America, 25 years ago, planted and extensively propagated by Christian missionaries in this remote part of China along the Tibet border, saved the lives of more than a million Chinese when the district was ravaged by drought and famine," Mr. Simpson says.

"When the first Americans and Europeans penetrated the Kansu province, and established mission stations in Taichow (old city), some forty years ago they found a native Chinese potato which was small, poor, and had a very low food value. The natives of the district, with little regard for the future, had been in the habit each year of eating the best of the crop and saving the poorest potatoes for seed," the communication continues.

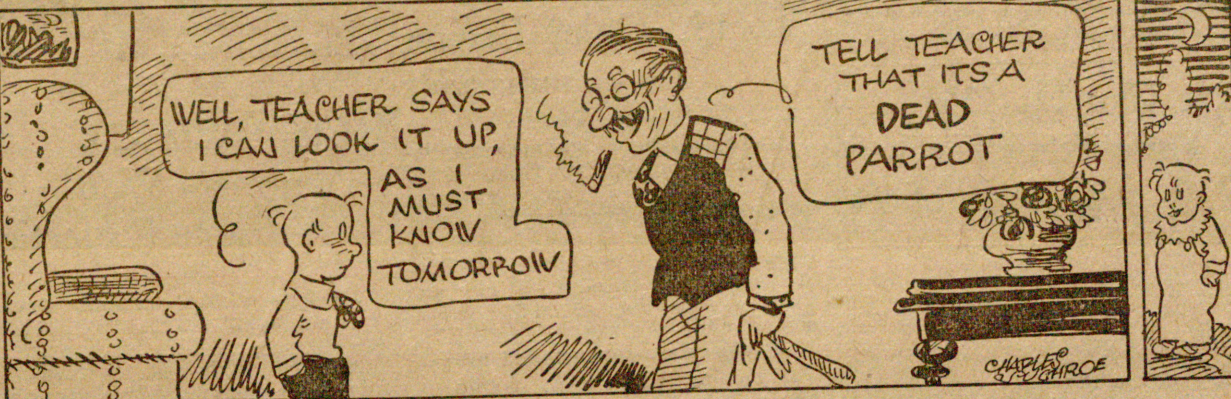

"A letter of appeal to the United States brought four early rose potatoes from Tennessee, and these were planted in 1897, two in Taichow, and two in Minchow. They grew very well and produced many tubers of fine quality in Chinese soil. The next year, however, the crop was divided with the Chinese, who were taught how to cut up the large potatoes for seed in order to keep up the quality of the crop.

"In a few years the new variety spread to several counties of the province, which had a total population of some 10,000,000 people. But the Boxer rebellion resulted in a recall of all the Christians from the district and while they were away the Chinese fell back into their old habit of eating all the best, and also of allowing the new variety to become mixed with the diseased older type of potato.

"The flavor and food value of the potato plantings had so deteriorated when missionaries were again operating in Kansu that Mr. Simpson decided to send for fresh tubers from America. Friends in Massachusetts forwarded a mere handful of Green Mountain potatoes, which were planted in 1903.

The experience of Chinese planters with the earlier American variety helped to speed the distribution of the Green Mountain tubers, which quickly supplanted both the native and the early rose types. In the three years' famine since 1928, one of the worst famines the world has ever known, almost half the population of Kansu, and also of the Province of Shensi, to the east, have died. But where the Green Mountain potato was cultivated the larger part of the population has been able to subsist. It has been estimated that fully a million people have been living by eating these potatoes.

"Where American potatoes had not been cultivated the people resorted to the bark of trees, roots of grass and insects. As these could not long sustain life the people depending upon them became easy victims of disease and pestilence. In a few limited areas, where wheat and rye had been introduced by missionaries, these cereals proved of great assistance in famine time. In many regions where Chinese wheat had been entirely killed off by blight the newer American varieties flourished, apparently not being susceptible to the same diseases as were the Chinese varieties."

Hubby'll Be Out of Luck If Girl Friend Phones

Chicago.—Every home can use a telegraphone, an invention which will be displayed at the Museum of Science and Industry, founded by Julius Rosenwald. The instrument, invented by Poulsen of Copenhagen in 1900, has been given the museum by William Dubilier of New York.

The telegraphone takes calls in the absence of its owner. It replies to calls that nobody's home, but that it will take any messages.

The vocal registration is simply a reproduction of the voice, similar to a dictaphone. The phone then switches to a recording setup and takes down the message of the caller. When the owner returns, he switches on the reproducing device and hears messages received in his absence.

A German is manufacturing the device, which may come into general use when it can be made more inexpensively than at present.

She had removed all of his tail feathers when he came back to life with a squawk and staggered into the yard.

His neck healed and Mrs. Winkley felt there was only one thing to do for poor, nude Jeremiah—make him a pair of pants.

London.—There were 21 murders committed among the 12,000,000 people in the area supervised by the London police during 1930. Yet the commissioner of metropolitan police, Lord Byng, looks at the number with dismay, for he points out that it is a tremendous increase over the number committed the previous year, which was ten. However, he seeks satisfaction in reporting that ten of the murderers were arrested and punished, nine committed suicide, including one who had done two of the murders, with only one still at large.

Unknown Animals Still in Unexplored Forests?

That there are still parts of the globe remaining to be explored and that they probably contain animals unknown to zoologists is indicated in a communication made to the French Academy of Sciences regarding Madagascar.

In the north of the great island off southeast Africa there are vast forests which the natives consider as tabu. Two French settlers who were allowed to enter one of these forests discovered there an animal of the lemur family hitherto unclassified. It is about 18 inches long, with a tail as long as its body.

In the opinion of zoologists these forests probably harbor other unknown animals.

Unique Salute Planned for the Kaiser's Death

Del Rio, Texas.—A miniature cannon, weighing only one pound and constructed from historical souvenirs picked up over the world, will be fired when death claims former Kaiser Wilhelm.

The gun will be fired by its owner, Rufus Sterling, who made it and fired it the first time when the armistice was signed. Then he said it would not be fired again until the Kaiser's death.

A portion of the metal base upon which the tiny cannon rests, came from an 18 inch smooth bore gun that was in use during the Civil war.

Cases attacking validity of the Chicago subway ordinance and its enabling legislation, and defending the right of cities and villages to regulate railroad crossings within their limits have been appealed to the Supreme Court of Illinois. The city of Alton is appealing the crossing case. The B. & O. railroad has installed flashing signals at four crossings on authority of the Illinois Commerce Commission, while the city has an ordinance requiring part-time watchmen. The traction case involves millions of dollars and attacks the city ordinance and the state legislation enabling the city of Chicago to provide for a unified local transportation system and to grant a terminal permit for such system.

The resignation of Norman L. Jones, newly elected Supreme court judge of the Seventh district, from the Circuit bench of the Second Judicial circuit, was recently received and accepted by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson. The governor has not set a date for a special election. Arguments are being brought forward by some that the selection should go over until the regular spring election on account of the expense incident to the holding of a special election in the six counties comprising the Second district.

James McCredie, aged seventy-one, died at his Aurora home September 12, content that his last wish for a visit from his friend, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, had been fulfilled. The governor went to his bedside the day before and visited with him for an hour. They had gone on annual fishing trips together for years and were fellow members of the Masonic fraternity.

The eighth annual Illinois Moose and Legion conclave at Springfield for three days starting September 19, with Supreme Dictator Rodney H. Brandon presiding, schedules Director General James J. Davis, national secretary of labor, for the principal address on Sunday. A football game between the Springfield high school team and the Mooseheart school team, a memorial service at the tomb of Abraham Lincoln and several parades will feature the event as well as the initiation of a large class into the orders.

At the national G. A. R. meeting held recently at Des Moines, Iowa, the Springfield and Illinois delegations went with the expectation of asking and securing the 1932 convention at Springfield. The last legislature appropriated $15,000 to help defray the expenses of the encampment should it be brought to the state, and many of the last of the "Boys in Blue" want to muster at the tomb of the Great Emancipator.

State Representative Schuyler B. Vaughan of Greenville was elected chairman of the Illinois delegation to the Yorktown sesquicentennial celebration, October 16 to 19. Louis A. Bowman, Chicago, was named secretary-treasurer. Frank L. Smith, Dwight; Representative Mary Davidson, Carthage; Senator Charles E. Lee, Decatur; and the chairman and secretary were selected as the executive committee. The other members of the delegation are: C. J. Doyle, Springfield; Paul Steinbrecher and Charles B. Pike, Chicago; Senators Richard J. Barr, Joliet; Ray Paddock, Wauconda; Frank McDermott, Chicago; Charles W. Baker, Monroe Center; Representatives M. E. Bray, Litchfield, and Roy Barnes, Bushnell.

President Hooyer has signed an order changing the duck hunting season for Illinois from October to November. The action was in response to requests from hunting clubs and sportsmen voiced through Governor Emmerson, Senator Otis F. Glenn and members of congress. In the original proclamation the dates were set by the President and the sportsmen stated that the date was too early as the ducks and wild fowls would not get to Illinois hunting grounds until after the season had closed.

A notice from the acting director of the national park service states that there are 100 buffalo, same model as used to roam the western plains, at Yellowstone Park, to be given away to anyone wishing them and agreeing to pay the expenses of shipping. As a yearling weighs around 900 pounds and a full-grown specimen a ton or more, they would not make very good playmates for the children, so the notice states.

A preliminary report has been received from the Illinois traffic survey in regard to the amount of traffic over the highway system as a whole, the ratio of pleasure vehicles and proportion that comes from other states.

Col. Frank D. Whipp, state superintendent of prisons, announces that excavations for four new buildings at the state penal farm at Vandalia have been completed and the work of erecting the buildings will begin at once. Inmate labor is being used wherever possible in order to cut the expense.

With 1,455 applicants to take examinations September 15, 16, 17 and 19, the state civil service commission has been kept busy. Workers at several trades, nurses and guards for the reformatory were being examined. Examinations were held at Springfield, Chicago, Quincy, Champaign, Rock Island, Peoria, East St. Louis and Carbondale.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson left the state on the 11th of the month for the purpose of attending a Masonic meeting at Detroit, and Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling became acting governor until he too left for the same place, where he received the thirty-third degree in the Scottish Rites, when Senator Richard J. Barr, of Joliet, president pro tem of the senate, became acting governor.

Distribution of a state fund of $500,000 for aid during the present biennium to mothers and children under the mothers' pension act, is now nearly complete, according to Miss Edna Zimmerman, superintendent of child welfare, department of public welfare. Payments have been made to 88 counties, seven do not administer state aid and seven failed to qualify for a share of the fund.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has appointed former Supreme Judge Paul Samuels of Jacksonville, Omer N. Custer of the state tax commission, and Frank V. Martinek, of Chicago, as the committee to ascertain the facts relating to gas tax evasions and the bootlegging of motor fuel within the state.

Col. James Robert Burns Van-Cleave, for many years a prominent resident of Springfield and known throughout the state for his political activities, died at his home in Alexandria, Minn., September 10, at the age of seventy-eight years. At the age of ten he ran away and joined the Union forces in the South and served as a soldier for seven months. His activities were varied during his life, he having served as private secretary to Robert G. Ingersoll, studied law, headed the legal department of the store which later became Marshall Field and Company, was a newspaper man and held several offices in Chicago and other places.

A meeting was held at the peach orchard on the farm of J. L. Hesler, near West Liberty, September 10, to which all the peach growers of the state were invited to inspect a small outbreak of "phony peach disease" reported in the orchard. Phil S. Haner, superintendent of the division of plant industry in the state department of agriculture, expresses the belief that, by the forewarning of the peach growers, the blight will be checked at once and not cause much loss.

Illinois beekeepers recently met at the home of A. L. Kildow chief of the state's apary inspection service and were urged by Director Stuart E. Pierson of the department of agriculture to extend their efforts to stimulate the public interest and appetite for honey. He said that if every one of the 120,000,000 people of this country ate an extra slice of bread each day well buttered and with some honey on it, both the wheat producers and the dairy and bee men would profit to a very material extent.

Rewiring the capitol building will soon be under way, and will afford thousands of dollars for employing electricians and common labor, according to a statement by C. Herrick Hammond, state supervising architect. The following hourly scale has been set: electricians $1.25, cable splicers $1.50, masons $1.50, lathers $1.25, plasterers $1.75, hodcarriers 90 cents, carpenters $1.25, laborers 55 cents, and electricians' helpers 45 to 75 cents per hour.

At a meeting of Illinois fire-fighters held recently at Murphysboro, S. L. Legreid, state fire marshal made the principal address. Among other things he stated that in the last fiscal year 66 convictions were secured against persons charged with arson. He proposed that the firemen adopt for their slogan—"Illinois is no safe place for firebugs."

According to a statement made by Rodney H. Brandon, director of public welfare, an increase of more than a half million pounds of pork per year has been recorded at the Illinois state institution farms. The total production of pork for the year ending June 30, 1931, was 1,880,600 pounds. The Jacksonville state hospital leads with a yield of 305,145 pounds, much of which is cured for future use. The institution swine are fed primarily with the scraps from the kitchen, supplemented with grain and pasture. All this materially lessens the state's cost of providing food for inmates of penal and charitable institutions.

The Illinois Commerce commission held a session in Chicago beginning September 15, at which time the Chicago natural gas case was given a hearing. The People's Gas, Light & Coke company has made application to permit it to substitute a mixture of natural and artificial gas for the artificial gas now used. The company has filed a new schedule in which it offers a 3½ per cent reduction from its 97 cent rate now established, and it is thought that the city will offer evidence hoping to show that the decrease is not enough.

WIDE VARIETY IN WOMEN OF WORLD

Alike Only in Tenderness and Charm.

Which nation produces the best all-round wife is a subject that would seem to call forth much difference of opinion. Some would agree that the little Frenchwoman with her deft fingers, skilled alike in the arts of sewing and cooking, could not be bettered—and when one has had the good fortune to lunch or sup at her table, and inspect her well-kept economical housebooks, envy of the lucky chap who is her husband burns high, writes a woman correspondent in the London Daily Mail.

Her children are daintily clothed and well fed, and her husband's every wish is anticipated.

Spanish wives certainly have a natural charm, with their limpid dark eyes, soft voices, and quiet manners, and home is indeed a place in which to be happy in sunny Spain.

Hospitality is second nature to these women, and the table welcomes any friends a husband may bring at any hour. These wives pride themselves that there is always "plenty," and a husband may congratulate himself on the position of "lord and master," which his lovely wife concedes him.

Others will argue that Germany is the only country in which to choose a partner for life, since there one finds the perfectly capable woman.

Again some say "choose the Italian if you would lead a life of bliss," for she is soft, luring, blending her tastes to yours—giving of herself—artistic in home decoration—proud of the name you have given her. She is a tender mother to her children, loving, faithful yet inspiring. The food will be delicious, even if not so well served as by either her German or French sister—and she will not complain either of her husband's extravagances or habits. She is psychological, and contents herself in the position of just being a clinging vine.

The Swedish woman has a glorious physique—strong as a man, she is yet as tender as a child. Her home is exquisitely run, and there are the most marvelous foods because she enjoys eating and a man likes company and appreciation while eating good food.

Perhaps Russian women are the most adaptable of all, and make wonderful wives in consequence. They have a quality of soul which is without doubt more attractive even than the physical beauty in which they so often excel.

The Dutch wife has often been quoted as an example of tidiness, cleanliness, spotless order, and in her picturesque neat attire, serving a cup of "cocoa," has been described throughout the world—while the Austrian woman is a most gracious as well as an efficient wife, with her poise, dignity and laughing eyes; her sense of humor makes life gay, yet her table can only be rivaled by her Polish cousin, whose excellent varieties seem destined for publicity.

American women have a certain flair for being well groomed in their persons and their homes, and this amazing quality makes them the type of wives who can do housework; look after their own babies; prepare and serve a very tasty meal; and yet be smart to dance in the evenings or make up a four for tennis, bridge or golf.

But no woman can look like the English woman on a horse, at the races, or in her box at the opera! She has a certain dignity—an inbred poise—which makes her the one type to preside over the long table in a country home.

She has intelligence, pluck and natural courage—it has often been said she is the real strength of England, for she is the mother of her great race of men's men!

Panacea

"Did my medicine do any good?" "A wonderful remedy, doctor. I took three spoonfuls and my cough went; I rubbed three spoonfuls into my knee for rheumatism and the rest we used to clean the silver."

Tree Rings to Fix Date of Remote Civilization

Reports of success have been made from the National Geographic society's expedition into the Southwest, which is endeavoring to fix the date definitely of a remote civilization which undoubtedly existed. This is being done by a study of the tree rings as found in some timbers of the ancient structures. This work will enable the scientists to date the period when the complex and highly developed civilization of Chaco Canyon produced the Beautiful Village (Pueblo Bonito), a communal dwelling of some 2,500 people, centuries before the white man set foot on American soil. The mementos of a civilization which rivaled those of the ancient Old world culture, of which the Bonitans apparently knew nothing, have already been brought to Washington from year to year. But always there was the perplexing question, "How old are they?" By minute study and comparisons of the rings of the timbers uncovered and old trees and stumps of the vicinity, it is hoped to arrive at a very accurate date.

Lightning's Prank

Lightning struck four sides of a house in Battle Creek, Mich., without injuring the occupants. In the bedroom, where Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Ackley were sleeping, it shattered a mirror. On the front porch it ruined two sets of golf clubs. On the north side of the house it raised the roof an inch. On another side it came in along the radio aerial.

What It Means

Vamping Vi—Holding a handkerchief to your nose like that means you are in love.

Victim—Love nudding! I'd means I've got a code id by head.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Church on Business Basis

It costs $1 for each person who wishes to hear Rev. R. B. Hooper, of Fort Worth, Texas, preach. The minister adopted the box office idea himself. He decided that most persons had money when they went to church, but that a collection plate was not quite the thing to pry it loose.—Indianapolis News.

Extremes in Arizona

Almost any sort of weather may be found within Arizona. Several times in recent months both the high and low record marks for the United States were in Arizona. Frequently the maximum temperature in southern Arizona exceeds 100, while the minimum of the northern mountain regions is in the twenties.

Neutral

"You seem upset." "Yes; my wife has just had a quarrel with the cook." "Did you take either side?" "Not I! I need them both."

Doctor Is Right

A physician says that success depends upon the functioning of the glands. The sweat glands?—Minneapolis Journal.

Always Illusioned

Alas! By the time a man outgrows Santa Claus, he believes rich men are eager to let him share in a sure thing.—Spartanburg Herald.

Harvest

"Why that net at the railroad crossing?" "To catch auto parts."

Question

"Time is money." "Then why ain't every hobo rich?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

If your castle in the air is a pleasant little shack on a hilltop in the woods surrounded by five acres of land, you can realize it.

Whatever you are going to do to your house to improve it, it costs more than you expected.

Don't Let TRICKY COMPARISONS Mislead You

DON'T be fooled by impractical challenges—loose guarantees—involved laboratory "findings"—misleading classifications ("first line," "second line," etc.)—false price comparisons—claims of "25% savings". Distributors of "special brand" tires want to confuse you in their desperate attempt to gain your confidence.

All that Firestone asks is that YOU be the sole judge. We lay our story of actual Firestone values before you. Then we back it up with the simplest of comparisons that you can make at any Firestone Dealer's. Compare cross-sections cut from Firestone Tires and the would-be-competitors. That's all. They tell you the story.

Stormy Session Marks Death of $70,000 Deal

Cathers stated that Judge Ruel had asked him to present figures as to the amount the assessments would be decreased in the subdivision if the lateral sewers were omitted. He was backed by village attorney Howard Schluntz who stated that everything that had been done in regards to the matter mentioned had been done on the suggestion of Judge Ruel and that everything had been handled strictly to law and that the Judge had even intimated as much that he favored the sewer and the attorney said he could not see why the Judge had changed his mind in this matter.

The engineer then stated that he had $4,000 in fees tied up in the sewer project and that he had acted on good faith and with the understanding that the board would go ahead with the project. The property owners demanded that the board drop all sewer proceedings for the present, but the board would not indicate if they would do this or not.

Frank A. Tooley, one of the large property owners then addressed the board saying that he understood they had been given 60 days in which to appeal from Judge Ruel's decision and that if they did appeal the case the objectors would meet them in the Supreme Court and even the U. S. Supreme Court if need be as the objectors were ready to fight the sewer question to the last ditch.

Village attorney Schluntz then replied that the board had no intention of appealing the case. When Mr. Caters was asked how his firm expected to get the $4,000 he claimed was due them for engineering work done on the sewer project he replied that if the sewer would ever be taken up again in the future and put thru they would then be paid and that they could not collect from the village now, but if the village board would discharge him and engage another engineer and go ahead with the sewer he could bring suit against the village for his fees.

Robert Marks made a fiery speech against the sewer project and the way it has been handled and said that the first thing the board should do was to extend the water mains to all the streets of the village so as to afford adequate fire protection. He pointed out that as things now stand a sewer system as proposed would be worthless as there are no water mains on many of the streets on which the sewer was to be laid and that the sewer could not be operated without water.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Krapp who have quite extensive property holdings in and out of the village limits showed they had an assessment of $6,000 and that their property would not be benefited to this amount by the proposed sewer. Many others of the property owners made very emphatic speeches asking that the sewer matter be dropped, pointing out that the project would mean a great burden for many of the small home owners and that in the present depression it was a mighty poor time to start an expensive improvement as had been contemplated.

The history of the sewer project dating back to 1926 was reviewed by alderman Ona E. McGovney in which he pointed out that at that time the matter of drainage had come up that the board had decided to get competent engineers on the job to see just what could be done and that the sewer was finally the outgrowth. He pointed out that the citizens did not express any objection at the first public hearing and that the board should have been acquainted with the feeling of the public at the time and not allowed them to get the matter under way before they voiced their objections.

Hot charges and equally hot denials were made. John Horras was also very outspoken in his plea for better city water service and the extension of the water mains. He presented the petition of property owners on Niethammer street for water main extensions sometime ago, but the petition appears to have been lost.

A motion was made by alderman Milton Krapp to discharge the engineer, but there being no second to the motion it was withdrawn.

Mr. Tooley then asked the board to go on record as dropping the sewer project. Alderman Krapp made a motion to this effect but there was no motion. Mr. Marks then scored the board for sitting tight and charged they were showing by their attitude that they were working for the interests of the engineers and not of the tax payers who had put them in office.

The deadlock was finally broken when alderman Richard Hensel declared "I'll take the bull by the horns and second the motion." The motion was then put to a ye and nay vote. Alderman Albert Braun voted nay, and then alderman Ona E. McGovney suggested that inasmuch as the board had voted to kill the sewer proceedings for the present that the board members ought to make it a ye vote which was done and alderman Braun changed his vote to ye.

The board then went on record in favor of dropping the sewer matter for the time being.

Attorney Schluntz then advised that the board had a written contract with the engineer which seemed to be news to most of the people. When George Koeller asked where the contract was no one seemed to know. Attorney Schluntz advised that in order to avoid future muddles about local improvements, the taxpayers when they desired the board to put thru an improvement project, should first get together, decide what they want then circulate a

Delinquent Tax Payers Want Board To Stone Streets

At the meeting of the Mokena village board Wednesday night the clerk reported that 19 automobile owners in the village had failed to pay their vehicle license for this year and the board ordered that the delinquent ones be turned over to Judge John F. Schultz for collection.

John H. Nordsell is building a new home on the south side of the village and replied that he had a mud hole for a street and said he would not pay his license until he had his street put in a passable shape. He asked the clerk to read the vehicle license ordinance and it was shown that no separate fund is kept of the money collected for vehicle license as provided in the ordinance and the ordinance further provides that the money collected from these licenses shall be used for street purposes only. The matter was argued pro and con. Mr. Nordsell presented a petition from the property owners along his street asking the board to stone this street. The petition was ordered tabled until the next meeting. It is understood that the board has secured a carload of stone from the township by paying only for the freight on the stone.

Alderman Ona E. McGovney explained that the reason the village streets have not been repaired was because the board was waiting for the outcome of the sewer project.

Tinley Park Base Ball Team Wallups Frankfort 5 to 1

The Tinley Park Ball team journeyed to Frankfort last Sunday to return the game played in Tinley on Labor Day, and they returned it in full measure. At the end of the game the score was Tinley Park 5, Frankfort 1. The outstanding player on the Tinley team was E. Schuldt, the pitcher. He held the Frankfort team to one hit and only five men reached first base in the entire game, struck out 14 and allowed one base on balls, was never in danger at any time and was going as strong at the last inning as when he started. Frankfort only got one ball out of the infield in the entire game and their only scoring threat was in the sixth inning, when they scored the only run.

Mager also pitched fine ball but his wildness and 10 hits kept him in trouble in every inning.

Next Sunday October 4th Tinley Park will play Oak Forest again at Tinley. The last game played by these teams went to Tinley by a 4 to 1 score. Oak Forest won the previous game 2 to 1 so this will give the teams a chance to show which is the best team. This is also the final game of the season for Tinley Park and a record breaking crowd is looked forward to. The usual prices will prevail. The game will be called at 2:00 p. m. sharp. Come out and give the boys a send off for the last game.

esting display of antiques in which were included brittan set of tea and coffee pot and creamer, brass coffee drip-olater all over one hundred years old; brass Egyptian tray; Empress Eugenie hat and a bonnet the latter bought in the store of the late Mrs. Kate Sippel in Mokena 40 years ago; tuning fork and shoe horn brought from Switzerland nearly a century ago; crochet baby bonnet worn by four generations; Indian peace pipe; Indian moccasins and a necklace of a Hindoo maiden.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hall of Mokena exhibited a baby chair 80 years old; pipe 100 years old; homespun linen handkerchief 150 years old; a homespun piece of wool blanket 100 years old.

Mrs. Max Haass of Frankfort, showed two silver spoons 103 years old.

Mrs. Jarchow of Frankfort showed a lace scarf, sugar bowl, creamer and spoon holder close to 100 years old.

Mrs. George Barnes of Joliet exhibited a German bible printed in 1804. The Fokers family of Frankfort also exhibited bibles printed in 1848.

Mrs. Fred Warning of Frankfort had in her collection of relics; a blue sugar bowl, a wedding gift given to her grandmother, Mrs. Ann Miller of Mokena close to a century old. A silver watch dated 1858 which her father, Thomas Kinty carried thru the Civil War. A tin type 70 years old of her grandfather, Jackson Miller, and of George and Charles Moriarty, all of Mokena.

Mrs. Raymond Warning exhibited silver flower vases 95 years old.

Two blue cups and saucers over 80 years old brought from England by Mrs. Susan Smith of Mokena were exhibited by Adeline and Ada Semmler to whom they had been given by Mrs. Smith.

In addition to his violin dated 1746 J. A. Martin of Mokena, also displayed a relic of pre-prohibition days in the shape of a porcelain whiskey canteen of untold age.

Mrs. Mollie Jackson of Mokena had an interesting piece of furniture in a marble top parlor table 75 years old.

Two very old brass preserving kettles used in the early days were displayed by Elmer Woodcock of Frankfort and Mrs. Wm. Semmler, of Mokena. The latter also had on display two bask silk waists and a lady's bustle dating back fifty years, formerly owned by Mrs. John Semmler of Mokena.

Mrs. J. V. Hall of Mokena had an interesting antique in a quilt 65 years old made by her mother from her wedding dress.

Mrs. Fred Warning also had a pretty antique on display in a blue and white counter pane or bedspread made of wool by her grandmother, Mrs. Ann Miller 86 years ago.

The Don C. Hall family of Mokena had a splendid collection of antiques. A few of the outstanding exhibits in their collection were a very gorgeous black silk dress and a black brocade coat lined with orchid satin and trimmed the length way with wide strips of silk battenberg. This was a fine example of the glories of dress 100 years ago. A lady's riding habit also created much comment. In addition to the above there were exhibits of coins of all nations, two guns, one dated 1822, the other bearing the date of 1831 and an Indian tanned buckskin and a deer hide.

In the line of furniture were a hand made dresser once owned by the father of Levi Doty of Frankfort. This dresser is 100 years old. A rope bed also of the Doty collection said to be 115 years old, was a very interesting antique.

Edward Schmidt of Mokena had a rifle on exhibit that is 99 years old.

Mrs. Peter Spiess of Mokena has a number of old relics, which however she did not exhibit at the Centennial.

She has a dish which was presented to her mother when she was married. Her mother's maiden name was Susannah Murfit. She was married to Wm. Hewson. Grandma Hewson presented the dish to Mrs. Spiess's mother on a Christmas Day with a plumb pudding on it. Mrs. Spiess does not know just how old it is, but as near as she can remember it has been in four generations. She also has two silver spoons which belonged to her great-great grandmother. These spoons have been used by four generations. In the collection is a cup and saucer 85 years old. Also a knife given to her by her brother-in-law many years ago. The knife came from Switzerland.

We have tried to enumerate all of the exhibits, but if any have been omitted it has not been done intentionally and we would appreciate it if our attention is called to any omission that might have been made.

The Don C. Hall Co., professional entertainers from Mokena put on a number of sketches which made a decided hit with the large crowd. Later a number of magic specialties were produced by Don Hall, Jr., which were decidedly clever and mystifying. Carlos Hall and his sisters, Alva and Wanda furnished Hawaiian music.

Two ball games livened up the program as also did a few horse shoe pitching games.

The Edelweisse (Wachter) orchestra of Mokena played old time music to which many of the older folks danced in the afternoon. Frederick Steinberg, a former resident of Frankfort township, now living in Green Garden, was very active in spite of his age of 94 years and 9 months. He showed how to step off the old time steps with real vim and vigor. He and Mrs. Wm. Brueggman danced a number of dances and were awarded a cash prize of $5 as the oldest couple dancing.

Another cash prize of $5 went to Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Hasenjaeger of Green Garden as the oldest couple on the grove, their ages being 76 and 75 years respectively. Mr. Hasenjaeger is cashier of the Frankfort Citizens Bank.

Mrs. Elizabeth Baumann of Frankfort, aged 94 years was the oldest woman on the grove. She is quite spry in spite of her nearness to the century mark.

Mr. and Mrs. Don C. Hall of Mokena attired in the costumes of 100 years ago attracted much attention and comment as they strolled about the grove.

Ant badges bearing the inscription "1831 Centennial Frankfort Twp. 1931. Sunday, Sept. 27, 1931" were presented to each visitor until the supply was exhausted. Miss Adeline Semmler, daughter of the editor assisted in the distribution of these badges. A register book in which the visitors names were written was in charge of Miss Ada Semmler, the editor's youngest daughter.

The antique booth was in charge of Mrs. Wm. Semmler, Mrs. Louis Steinhagen and Mrs. Max Haass.

The refreshment stand did a land office business selling hot coffee and hot sandwiches as the fall wind was quite chilly. In the evening the big dance pavilion was packed and the music was again furnished by the Edelweisse orchestra.

All in all the celebration was a wonderful success in every way and people attended from Mokena, Joliet, Chicago, Tinley Park, Orland Park, Matteson and many other towns and cities.

Many old time friends met and renewed acquaintances after years of separation. One could not help but go back in imagination to the days when the redmen roamed this country and wonder what this country looked like 100 years ago. Who will celebrate the next birthday party a hundred years hence?

Wolf Road
Receives Attention
In Cook County

Cook county is making things move right along on Wolf road. The following letter from Anton H. Lauer, Des Plaines real estate man to the editor tells of much activity at the north end:

Dear Mr. Semmler:
I am sorry that I could not attend your recent meeting in Will County, but am glad to know that your meeting was successful. I had an interesting meeting with the President of the village of Wheeling and he assured me that he and his board would go before the County Board to assure them the right of way thru Wheeling to Milwaukee Ave., and Dundee Road on Wolf road.

The Wolf road pavement to Hinz is about finished. There was an article in the Chicago Tribune recently regarding Wolf Road as an arterial highway north of Northwest highway to Milwaukee Ave.

We are very much pleased with the success of Wolf Road and the News-Bulletin on the south end of Wolf Road.

Mrs. Anton Benson
Mokena, Wins
Honor Roll Again

Mrs. Anton Benson of Mokena has again been placed on the Chicago Tribune flower garden contest Honor Roll. Mrs. Benson last year received recognition but subsequently made so many changes that her name was removed from the list. Now a blaze of color and other results of hard work have again won her the honor.

Two of her village neighbors also have been honored. They are Mrs. Harry Mall and Mrs. A. C. Scheiblich. The latter has large floral areas interspersed with trees, all of which she planted except for four large veterans. One of her prize constructions has been a "rest retreat" where she may enjoy the results of her gardening. Across the street is the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Mall, planted to a simplicity that at the same time gives year round color.

THE TELEPHONE IDEA—Wall Street Journal, New York.
Fifty years ago, the New York telephone directory was a card listing 252 names and the service cost $240. Today there are 2,622,658 telephones being operated by the New York Telephone Co., most of which are in the Greater City. In five years 600,000 new subscribers have been added. Comparing this total with whole countries is interesting. For instance, Russia is probably the most backward nation in the matter of communications in Europe and has approximately 370,000 telephones, most of which are in the leading cities, and it is safe to say that the majority of the population have not seen a telephone and many of them not even heard of this great communication instrument among nations.

How They Say "Number, Please?"

IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Ewing Galloway

On the roofs of these buildings in Bratislava, formerly Pressburg, are crossarms and insulators which would seem to indicate that, telephonically speaking, some cities in Czechoslovakia are still in the open-wire stage. The telephone, however, has played an important part in the development of the new Czechoslovakian Republic, particularly since November, 1928, when transoceanic radio telephone service was extended to Prague, the capital. In October, 1929, overseas service was extended to the remainder of the telephones in the country. About 170,000 Czechoslovakian telephones may now be reached by Bell System subscribers. The Czechoslovakian telephone operator cuts her "Number, please?" in two, using only the latter half of the expression. When she receives a signal from a calling subscriber, she answers with the Czech word "Prosím?" or, sometimes, with the German word "Bitte?" In either event, what she means is "Please?"

What's New In Salads?

HAVEN'T you served the same old salads in the same old way until you were secretly glad that people's appetites are like children's tastes?

They like repetition in both foods and stories. But scientists tell us to diversify our eating and to be careful to train children to like a wide number of foods. And then there's your neighbor who, every now and then, serves some novelty in foods. Haven't you wanted to go her one better, and cupid your brain for a still more brilliant recipe to serve? Hawaiian pineapple is always a resource, not only because it is one of the best fruits canned, but because there is so much of it this season that the price is lower than usual.

Summer is the time for salads, so let's look over that field, and see what new combinations have been recently devised. Did you ever hear of combining prunes, salted peanuts, cranberry sauce, maraschino cherries in mayonnaise and Hawaiian pineapple in a salad? There's a recent recipe for this combination, and its name is "Bog Salad," inspired, presumably, by the logs in which the cranberries grow. How about apricot halves, green gage plums, cottage cheese, ripe olives, green peppers, pimiento, raisins and sliced pineapple? There's a recipe for this, too, and it rejoices in the gay name of "Nosegay Salad."

Here Are the Recipes

But it's no use going on with a list of ingredients without giving you the recipes for these new combinations, so here are those for the two

we have mentioned and for several more besides:

Bog Salad: Cut the slices from a No. 2½ can of Hawaiian pineapple in halves, and place, round side touching, in eight beds of lettuce. Stone sixteen cooked prunes, and fill with stiff cranberry sauce, leaving open at top to show the red. Place two on each salad, in the cavities formed by the hole in the pineapple slice. At the opposite sides pile stiff mayonnaise filled with chopped maraschino cherries. Sprinkle one-half cup salted peanuts over the tops of the eight salads.

Nosegay Salad: Chill the slices from a No. 2½ can of Hawaiian pineapple, and place in eight lettuce nests. Drain and chill thirty-two canned apricot halves. Place four of each alternately around the pineapple. Pile cottage cheese in center, and make a sunburst effect of alternate strips of green pepper and pimiento, topping with a ripe olive. Dress with French dressing made with the syrup from the plums and pineapple, instead of vinegar, adding a few chopped raisins.

Fruits with Cheese

Pineapple and Grapefruit Salad with Cheese Dressing: Drain two 8-ounce cans of Hawaiian pineapple tidbits (or use one and one-half cups of diced sliced canned pineapple), and toss lightly with one cup grapefruit sections, one cup orange sections and one-half cup halved seeded grapes. Pile in lettuce leaves and pour over the following:

Cheese Dressing: Shake together six tablespoons salad oil, one tablespoon lemon juice, one tablespoon syrup from the canned pineapple, salt and paprika. Smooth slowly into four tablespoons crumbled Roquefort cheese, and add two tablespoons chopped pimiento. This recipe serves eight.

California Salad: Place the slices from a No. 2½ can of Hawaiian pineapple in crisp lettuce leaves. Cream together one package of cream cheese and one triangle Roquefort cheese, and add one-fourth cup raisins and one-fourth cup chopped dates. Pile lightly in center of pineapple and serve with mayonnaise slightly thinned with pineapple syrup. This serves eight.

Salads with Cider and Lime

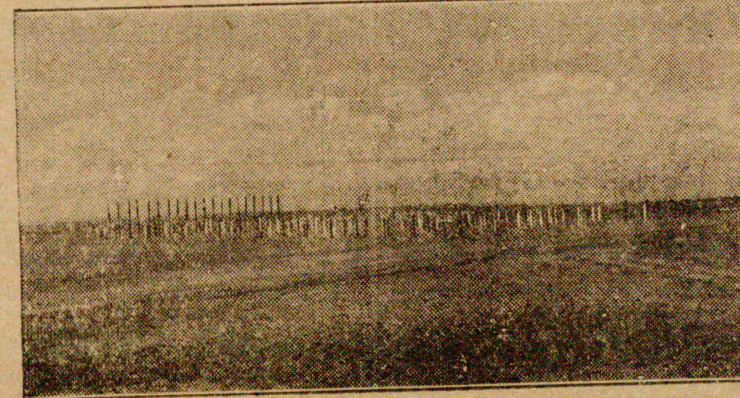

Cider and Pineapple Jelly Salad: Dissolve one package lemon gelatin in one cup boiling cider and add two tablespoons sugar. Add the contents of a No. 2 can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple and two-thirds cup diced apple, and when the mixture starts to set, fold in one-third cup mayonnaise. Mold in a loaf. Chill. Serve in slices on lettuce, and garnish with mayonnaise. This serves ten.

Jellied Pineapple Lime Salad: Dissolve one package lime gelatin in three-fourths cup boiling water, and add the contents of a No. 2 can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple. When partly set, add one-half cup shredded blanched almonds, and mold in a flat tin. Cut in squares and serve on lettuce with cream mayonnaise garnished with a red and green cherry. Lay a cheese ball rolled in chopped mint or parsley at the side of each. This recipe serves eight to ten.

Tests in Field Laboratories Add
To Life Span of Telephone Poles

On the top of a hill near Limon, Colorado, there is an unusual sight. Standing upright are closely-bunched columns in long ordered rows looking like a burying ground of some savage race. But on nearer inspection these columns turn out to be poles, much like fence slight that it would prove wiser to use the less effective one because of its much lower cost. Other climates, other soils might make it imperative to use the first preservative regardless of its greater price. These are among the problems posts, but with the diameter of the usual telephone pole. They are, in fact, telephone poles; not carrying cross-arms and supporting wires, but undergoing weathering tests as part of the laboratory research program of Bell Telephone Laboratories.

At Limon, Colo., stands this testing plot of telephone poles. Their short length facilitates handling and examination.

The plot at Limon is one of the three maintained in this country by the Bell System for investigations to prolong the life of its telephone poles. Six miles from the Gulf of Mexico at Gulfport, Mississippi, there is another, and the third is at Chester, New Jersey.

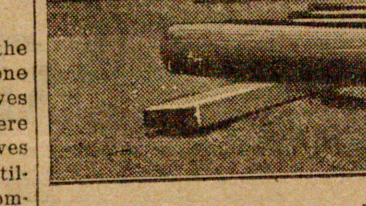

Weighing the Advantages

Before they are put into the ground, practically all telephone poles are treated with preservatives to resist the decay of wood. There are various kinds of preservatives used, consisting of coal tar distillates and other chemical compounds. The problem of the telephone engineer is to find out which one of these is the best for the particular conditions encountered.

One type of preservative may be more effective than another in warm, humid atmospheres, and an entirely different kind superior in a dry climate. Or in certain climates the difference in decay resistance of certain preservatives may be so that these strange appearing test plots help to decide. There is also the matter of the different woods for telephone poles. Southern yellow pine, chestnut, cedar, and lodgepole pine are all used, and each has its advantages under certain conditions.

The plot at Limon is one of the three maintained in this country by the Bell System for investigations to prolong the life of its telephone poles. Six miles from the Gulf of Mexico at Gulfport, Mississippi, there is another, and the third is at Chester, New Jersey.

This borer will bring out a solid plug of wood which shows how far the creosote has penetrated the pole.

The telephone pole, which in its unassuming way performs a yeoman's task in providing telephone communication, is beset by numerous enemies. Small white burrowers known as termites eat their way in veritable little tunnels through the poles. In some regions of the country a black insect, referred to as the carpenter ant, commits similar depredations. But the chief foe is decay, which is brought about by fungous organisms.

In combatting these enemies, creosote is the most commonly used preservative. It is a heavy black coal-tar product with an asphaltic smell. In creosoting Southern pine poles, 100 to 250 poles are placed in a huge cylinder. Its ends are then bolted on to permit the running-off of high pressures. The oil is at a temperature of approximately 200° F., and the treatment continues for several hours, until the poles become well impregnated with the creosote oil.

For a Long and Useful Life

Chestnut and cedar poles are given open-tank treatment. Fifty or more poles are stood on end, and first hot and then cold creosote oil is run into the tank. The hot-cold process is used because the fibres of the wood will contract when subject to cooling and draw in the oil.

A very much extended lease on life is given to telephone poles by the use of the preservatives. The engineers at the test plot can easily demonstrate this by showing the difference in poles, both cut from the same log and set out at the same time, one of which has been given a preservative treatment while the other hasn't.

Telephone poles, properly treated, will often last as long as thirty years, which is probably an ample fulfillment of the stewardship of almost any piece of telephone apparatus.

Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

ORLAND PARK

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson who have been in charge of the Purple Candle restaurant on 143rd street during the summer, have returned to Oak Forest. Mrs. Fred Miller of Palos Park is taking their place commencing this week.

Bernard Homering has taken over the management of the filling station west of Orland at Wolf road and 143rd street.

Mr. Lucas, who is a watchman in a lumber yard in Chicago came near witnessing a murder near the lumber yard Saturday night. He saw several men walking back and forth on the street near the lumber yard. Shortly afterward they drove away in a high powered car. Sunday morning after he had returned home, Chicago police came out and told him a man had been held up and murdered, and they wanted to know if he witnessed the murder, but Mr. Lucas said he did not see the actual murder committed, but only saw the men in the street, and they were not near enough to be recognized.

Preparations are being made for the advent of cold weather in the cabin in the Warner woods. A fireplace is now being built.

The Orland and Mokena school teams played on the Orland school diamond Monday afternoon. Orland was defeated by a score of 2-0.

Three surveyors have been at work all the past week surveying for the proposed lake in the forest preserve north of Orland. A very complete topographical map is being prepared. It is proposed to have the minimum depth of the lake five feet. It is to be stocked with fish and used only for fishing and hunting purposes it is said.

W. R. Schussler is on a belated fishing trip in Land-o-Lakes, Wis.

A movement is on foot now to provide for winter sports in Orland Park. A foot ball team is in the making. It is proposed to locate the field at the Daniels place on Keane avenue and 143rd street, east of Orland Park. John Kline and Harry Daniels are reported to be promoting the foot ball team. Another feature planned is to flood the field this winter and make an ice skating rink.

Last Friday evening the sophomores of the Orland Park High school held a party at the school at which the freshmen of this year's classes were given the welcome hand. A good time was reported.

Miss Beulah Beagley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Beagley of Orland Park, and Samuel Ott of Lockport were united in marriage on September 9th at Crown Point, Ind.

Steinmetz has opened a barber shop in the Kruspe building.

A Mission will be held at St. Michael's Church by Father Sylvester, C. P., October 25th to November 1. Masses 5:30 and 7:30 a. m. In the evening services will be held at 8 p. m.

GIRLS BASKETBALL TEAM

The girls in the high school are thinking about organizing a basketball team as they are all very much interested in this sport. They have watched the boys who now have a splendid team, play so much, that they now feel that they know the game well enough to organize a team. They are now practicing making baskets as this is one of the most important things in basketball. By the end of the term we hope to have a fine team organized.

GIRLS CAPTAIN BALL TEAM ORGANIZED

The girls of the high school have organized a Captain Ball team under the direction of Mrs. Smith and Caroline Siple. The game is being played in Orland for the first time. It consists of two running guards, four captain guards, four captains and about four running guards. This game is very popular in all the Chicago high schools. We are very glad to add it to our list of games. The girls have done surprisingly well in such a short period of time and probably will do much better as the game continues. The girls also play volleyball and baseball.

TWO NEW TENNIS COURTS TO BE CONSTRUCTED

Tennis has become such a popular game in Orland this summer that the school board has made possible the construction of two new courts on the west side of the school. We formerly had the use of just one court which was not enough for the large crowd of young people who indulge in this sport. We wish to thank all those who have made possible the new courts.

THE ENROLLMENT OF THE ORLAND PARK SCHOOL

In the primary room there are eleven first graders, four second graders, and ten third graders, so which makes a total of twenty-five pupils.

In the intermediate room there are seven fourth graders, sixteen pupils in the fifth grade. So in the intermediate room there are twenty-three pupils.

In the grammar room there are fourteen sixth graders, eight seventh graders, and eight eighth graders. So in the grammar room there are thirty pupils.

In the High School there are twenty freshmen and eighteen sophomores.

There are fourteen boys in the freshman class and six girls. In the sophomore class there are six boys and thirteen girls. So in the high school there are thirty-eight pupils.

In the whole school there are one hundred and sixteen students.

Mrs. Anton Weiland accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Peiling and daughter returned to their home at Madison, Nebraska this week. They have been spending the past three weeks visiting at the home of their daughter and sister Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Smith of Orland Park, Ill.

FACTS ABOUT TAMMANY HALL

Editor News-Bulletin:

First I will go back to the origin of the organization. Tammany Society is a split off of the Red Men and named for that old Indian chief and great friend of the white man. The Tammany Society has had many of the best citizens of New York State and City as its members. It was not and is not a political organization as men of party faith have been members. Silas Wright White was at one sashem. Both George Clinton and DeWit were members. As the organization grew Democrats formed the Tammany Hall and became a powerful political faction.

THE TWEED RING

Wm. M. Tweed was comptroller of New York City. He had the letting of large contracts. He was like Big Bill, you know easy going and good natured and the contractors took advantage and lined their pockets.

Samuel J. Tilden an old bachelor, who was very wealthy prosecuted Tweed and his associates. Tilden kept an account of his expenses and charged nothing for his time or work on the case. In 1874 the Democrats nominated Mr. Tilden for governor and he was elected in spite of Tammany Hall who opposed him in the convention. In 1876 Tammany sent a solid delegation to the Democratic convention in opposition to Tilden, but Tilden was nominated and a majority of the voters I think believed him elected.

Cleveland was opposed by Tammany in the convention that nominated him for governor and also in the three conventions that nominated him for President.

Tammany Hall did not support Wilson for the nomination, so coming down to 1931 and 1932 those who wish Gov. Roosevelt well are not worried over the Tammany question.

There have been a good many men belonging to Tammany Hall who I have had the very highest regard for, the late Governor and U. S. Senator David B. Hill who died a poor man. Clarkson W. Potter who served in Congress for years and also governor of the state but will not take up any more of your space and thanking you in advance, I am,

Yours respectfully,

Elwood Maid To Compete For National Honors

Miss Lorraine Jennings, champion milkmaid for the Chicago area, is up-to-the-minute in her mode of travel. With her chaperone, Miss Martha Dunlap of the Pure Milk association, she is taking off on a Century Air Lines passenger plane October 11 for St. Louis where she is to compete in the National Milk Contest being conducted by the National Dairy Exposition throughout the following week.

Miss Jennings, who is 19 years old was selected to represent the Pure Milk association, the dairy farmers cooperative furnishing Chicago with its entire supply of fluid milk, because of the excellent records she has established at district milking contests conducted by the association during the past two years. In August, at the Will County Pure Milk association picnic she milked 24 1/2 pounds of milk in three minutes, an exceptional record.

When Miss Jennings competes in St. Louis she will be striving for some worth while prizes. The Exposition has offered $125 and a cup to America's champion; second, $100 and medal; third, $75 and medal; them.

fourth, $50 and medal and fifth, $25 and medal. For the first three days the preliminaries will be held. The six highest milkers will then compete in the final three days. The contest will be staged twice daily, with three minute milking periods each time.

An attractive brunette, Miss Jennings was raised on her parents' farm near Elwood, Illinois. Each morning and evening she milks 18 cows, so that when she goes to St. Louis milking at top speed in the contest will be just another chore to her.

The Savior, Lutherans teach that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and equal to the Father in every respect, that He is also the Son of the Virgin Mary and was made man in order that He might redeem the world, that He satisfied the demands of the divine Law for all mankind by keeping God's commandments in our stead, that He bore the punishment of our sins by suffering and dying in our stead on the cross, that He rose bodily from the dead and lives today, and that He will come visibly for the second and last time at the world's end to judge the living and the dead. A gang of gypsies traveling in a large automobile came to Mokena early Wednesday morning. Two of the women members of the gang came into the Royal Blue and finding Mrs. Anna Magerl, the manager alone in the store, proceeded to ask her for money. When she refused to accede to their requests, one of the gypsies ran behind the counter and pulled out the money drawer and attempted to pull out some money, but Mrs. Magerl managed to slam the drawer shut and prevented the gypsy from taking any money.

A railroad man came to the front door of the store about this time and the gypsies beat a hasty retreat without bagging any loot. It was later reported that they had fleeced a farmer out of $140. In another case one farmer's wife being home alone had to give the nomads two dozen eggs before she got rid of them.

By the evening of September 27 the Fifth corps was abreast of the First and the Third on its flanks. The Seventy-ninth division captured Montfaucon the morning of September 27 and on the next day Nantillois and the Bois de Beuge were passed despite determined resistance.

In the Third corps the Eightieth division had taken the Bois de la Cote Lamont after hard fighting, but attack after attack made with dogged determination across the open space toward Brielle-sur-Meuse was rolled back by the galling fire of the enemy from the town and its vicinity and by the artillery firing from east of the Meuse.

The Thirty-third division maintained its position September 27 and 28 and on September 29 relieved the Eightieth division by extending its left along the northeastern edge of Bois de la Cote Lamont, where it occupied difficult ground under the dominating heights east of the Meuse.

The Fourth division captured Nantillois September 27, but was forced by enemy counter-attacks to retire. The town was retaken and held on the following day by troops of the Fourth and Seventy-ninth divisions. After three days of almost continuous fighting the Fourth had taken the Bois de Brielle and entered the Bois de Ognon, but could not hold the latter against counter-attacks and the deadly machine-gun and artillery fire of the enemy. The fortitude and courage of the Fourth division in these operations were inspiring.

Meet Strong Resistance.

The Thirty-seventh division on September 27 attempted to advance beyond the Ivory-Montfaucon road, but each time it reached there was driven back by heavy shelling. On September 28, however, it pushed forward to a position north of the Clerges-Nantillois road. Clerges was entered, but not held. The following day the division again attacked Clerges, but the advance was abruptly halted by concentrated artillery fire.

The Ninety-first division on September 27 encountered strong opposition at Epinonville, which was reached, but could not be retained. Eclisfontaine was taken, but was evacuated, as an artillery barrage was to be laid on the road through the town the following day.

Epinonville was finally captured September 28, and the Bois de Clerges was occupied after hard fighting. Two attacks of the division from the Bois de Clerges on September 29 crumbled under fierce artillery and enfilading machine-gun fire, but on the third attack, despite severe losses, Genes was taken.

The full advantage of this important gain was lost, however, through the inability of the Thirty-seventh division to advance its left. This placed the right flank of the Ninety-first in a dangerous position, and it had to be withdrawn. During the afternoon the Thirty-fifth division was subjected to a heavy counter-attack, which also involved the left of the Ninety-first, but made no progress against it.

Three new German divisions had appeared by September 30 on the front of the First corps, and the battle continued with increased intensity.

The Thirty-fifth division was stopped by heavy fire soon after its attack opened, September 27, but later in the day it captured Charpentry and advanced to the ridge northeast, though suffering severe casualties. Montrebeau wood was taken September 28, and early next morning a detachment reached Exermont valley, but, being nearly surrounded, withdrew to the starting point. "Encountering very heavy artillery fire and an advance of the German Fifty-second and Fifth guard divisions, the Thirty-fifth withdrew from Montrebeau wood, which it had taken the day before. The Thirty-fifth suffered heavier casualties than any other division during these four days of continuous fighting.

The Twenty-eighth division, though subjected to strong artillery and machine-gun fire from the bluffs of the Argonne, captured Montblainville September 27. It could make slight headway against firm opposition from positions in the vicinity of Champ Mahaut, but carried them on September 28, and also captured Apremont. On September 29, after repulsing a German counter-attack, a slight advance was made against the defenses of Le Chene Tendu.

The Seventy-seventh encountered stiff resistance in the Argonne September 27, and was held to a small gain, but moved forward about a mile on September 28. Next day its right was advanced with little opposition.

During the first four days of fighting the First army, west of the Meuse, had made a maximum advance of about eight miles, reaching the Bois de la Cote Lemont-Nantillois-Apremont. The enemy had been struck a blow so powerful that the extreme gravity of his situation in France was obvious to him.

CHAPTER LIX

The second phase of the Meuse-Argonne operation, the period from October 1 to 11, involved the heaviest strain on me and the army.

There was little time to make readjustments among the troops, heavily engaged, without giving the enemy a respite in which to strengthen his defenses and bring up reserves.

The general attack was resumed at 5 a. m. on October 4, meeting desperate resistance by the enemy. In this attack, the Fourth division of the Third corps, in three days' bitter fighting, captured and held the Bois de Fays, making a gain of over a mile. Advances into the Bois le Pent de Faux were forced back by vicious counter-attacks. In similar hard fighting the Eighteenth division gained a foothold in the Bois des Ognon, against very heavy machine gun fire.

In the attack of the Fifth corps, the Third division pushed forward in the face of strong resistance. During the next two days this division extended its gains, but could make no headway against the Bois de Cunel. The Thirty-second division, which had taken Clerges October 1, advanced to just south of Genes on the fourth despite very severe hostile fire, and next day captured that town.

On the left of the army, the First corps was very successful. The First division in a fine display of power on October 4, drove a deep wedge into the enemy's line. This was of great value in affording space for the attack toward the Argonne to be launched later.

The fighting here was characterized by the stubborn nature of the German resistance and the offensive spirit of the division.

Case of the "Lost Battalion."

The right of the Twenty-eighth division fought its way down the Aire river in liaison with the First and captured Chery. The left of the division encountered much opposition and made but slight gains, notwithstanding its repeated attacks. The division was now facing west for nearly three miles along the Aire river. The Seventy-seventh division between September 29 and October 4 continued its attacks in the Argonne, advancing about a mile over difficult terrain.

In the assault of October 2 a mixed battalion of the division moved forward more rapidly than the troops on its right and left, and became completely surrounded by the enemy. It

My status now became that of commander of a group of armies. Major General Summerall was placed in command of the Fifth corps to relieve Major General Cameron, who was given command of the Fourth division. Major General Hines was promoted to the command of the Third corps in place of General Bullard. Major General Dickman, commanding the Fourth corps, was given the First corps and Major General Muir the Fourth.

These changes generally took effect October 12 but I retained direct command of the First army until the sixteenth.

CHAPTER LX

The Meuse-Argonne operations carried out between October 7 and 11 consisted of four specific attacks, as follows:

(1) October 7. The First corps, employing the Eighty-second division between the First and Twenty-eighth divisions, attacked the eastern edge of the Argonne forest.

(2) October 8. The French Seventeenth corps, re-enforced by the American Thirty-third and Twenty-ninth divisions, attacked east of the Meuse on the front Beaumont-Brabant-sur-Meuse, with the object of seizing the heights there.

(3) October 9. The Fifth corps, re-enforced by including within its front the First division, to which was attached a brigade from the Ninety-first division, attacked the heights of the Bois de Romagne.

(4) October 10-11. A general attack on the 20-mile front from Beaumont west to the Aire river.

The French Fourth army had not been able to keep abreast of the American First army, and it was evident that clearing the Argonne forest would materially aid its advance. The opportunity presented itself just at this time. Although on October 6 the enemy continued to hold the heights of Cunel and Romagne, nevertheless sufficient space had been secured along the Aire river to warrant an attack to the west with the object of striking the rear of the enemy's positions in the Argonne forest.

There was another important factor that entered into the decision to force the withdrawal of the enemy from the Argonne. This was the predicament advanced during the next few days to the commanding ground between Beaumont and Richene Hill.

In a well-conducted operation the Thirty-third division (Bell) crossed the Meuse early October 8 by bridges constructed during the night, captured Consenvoye, and progressed up the neighboring slopes. The following day a further advance was made, but heavy fire from the Borne de Cornouiller and the failure of the troops on the right to keep up forced a retirement to the morning line. This ground was retaken despite strong resistance, and by night of the 10th the division had established itself on the west slopes of Richene Hill.

The Fifty-eighth brigade of the Twenty-ninth division (Morton), under command of the French Eighteenth division, against considerable opposition pushed forward into the woods south of Richene Hill on the 8th, and during the next two days completed the capture of those woods. On the 11th, the Twenty-ninth division took command of its Fifty-eighth brigade. Its Fifty-seventh brigade, still under the French Eighteenth division, on the 12th made important gains in the Bois d'Ormont.

In conjunction with the operations by the French Seventeenth corps, the Fifth corps (Cameron) attacked in force October 9 and continued its efforts the next two days. The Third division (Buck) progressed on the 9th, and after fierce fighting seized Madeleine farm, which had previously proved a stumbling block, and partly cleared the Bois de Cunel. The following day it completed the capture of that wood and on the 11th extended its gains to the northwest.

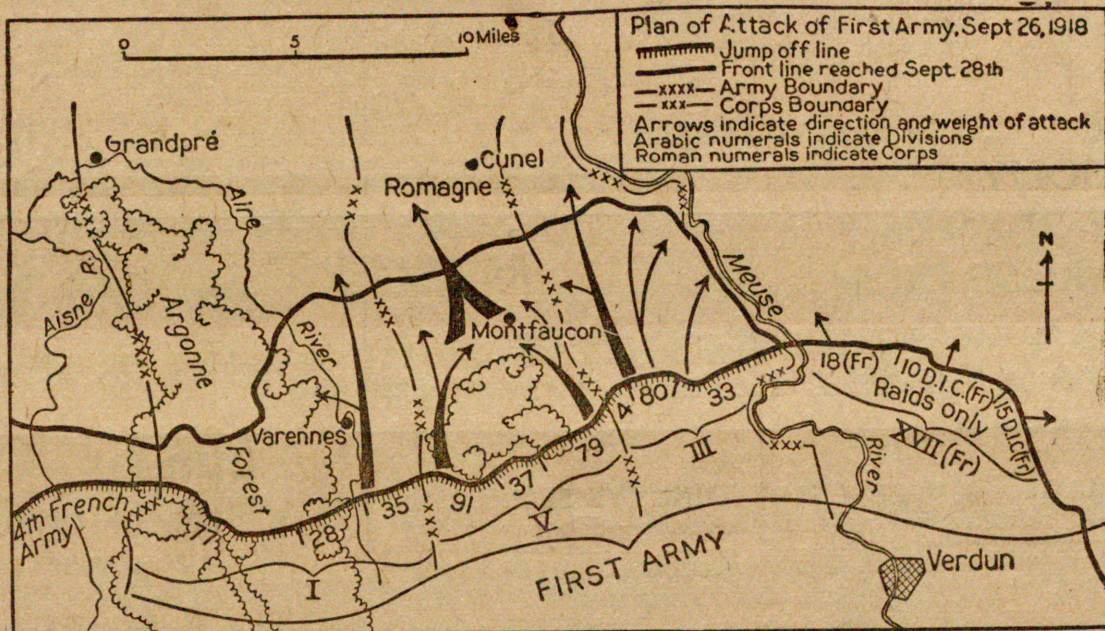

The Thirty-second division (Haan) reached Romagne October 9 and penetrated the enemy trenches on Cote Dame Marie on the 10th, but was driven from the latter and established its lines on the southern slopes of the hill.

Ninety-First Suffers Heavy Casualties.

The Ninety-first division (Johnston), on the left of the Thirty-second division, fought all day on the 9th for Hill 255, suffering heavy casualties, and the following day occupied the position. The advance then continued until stopped on Hill 288 and the Cote Dame Marie. The division was relieved the night of October 11.

The First division (Summerall), in a resolute attack, captured the difficult enemy positions on and near Hill 272 on the 9th, and established its line on the 10th north of the Cote de Mal-dah. It also was relieved on the 11th. During the operations of the 9th and 10th, the One Hundred and Eighty-first brigade (John B. McDonald) of the Ninety-first division was attached to the First division, being transferred to the Thirty-second division on the night of the 10th.

The advance of the Third corps (Bullard) was bitterly contested by the enemy, but October 10 the Fourth became popularly known as the "Lost Battalion."

For four days every effort of the division to relieve this beleaguered force was unsuccessful, and every effort of the Germans to force its surrender was without avail.

French Call for Help.

In the meantime the French Fourth army on our left had been held up at Blanc Mont. As a consequence, Marshal Foch appealed to me for assistance. Although I was loath to spare any troops from our front, so serious was our own situation, I sent, in accordance with my promise, the Second division (Lejeune), which was followed later by the Thirty-sixth (W. K. Smith).

October 3 the Second division, accompanied by French tanks, in a brilliant maneuver against heavy machine gun resistance, stormed and captured the dominating German positions on the Medeah Farm-Blanc Mont Ridge, and continued on toward St. Etienne, which was taken on October 8 with the aid of one brigade of the Thirty-sixth division. This success carried forward the French divisions on its right and left and, as reported by General Gouraud, enabled the whole Fourth army to advance.

Our Second Army Organized.

The broadening of the front of attack to the east of the Meuse and the probability that we should soon become engaged along our whole line made it advisable to establish another army. Accordingly, the Second army was formed with its front extending from the Moselle to Fresnes-en-Woevre, and placed under the command of Major General Bullard on the twelfth. The remainder of our front from Fresnes-en-Woevre to the Argonne forest, inclusive, was left under the First army, to which Major General Liggett was assigned. Both commanders were recommended by me for promotion to lieutenant general.

of the "Lost Battalion," which under Maj. C. W. Whittlesey had been holding out near Binarville since October 2.

Efforts to relieve the battalion had so far been unsuccessful, and the men had consumed their rations and expended most of their ammunition, although our aviators had tried to drop small amounts to them. The battalion was resisting heroically against great odds, without any thought of surrender.

Pursuant to the plan an attack was made by the Twenty-eighth and Eighty-second divisions against the left and rear of the enemy's positions in the region of Chatel-Chery and Cornay. After a night march of eight miles the Eighty-second division (Duncan) entered the line between the Twenty-eighth (Muir) and the First (Summerall). In a series of daring movements to the west by the Twenty-eighth and Eighty-second divisions, Cornay, Chatel-Chery and the dominating hills northwest of Apremont were captured.

Although the continued operation of these two divisions was attended by severe fighting the results were immediate. The enemy was forced to withdraw from that region, the Argonne forest was cleared, and the Seventy-seventh division was enabled to advance to the relief of its "Lost Battalion." It then pushed on to the north in pursuit of the retreating enemy.

East of the Meuse.

General Claudel's French Seventeenth corps, east of the Meuse, attacked October 8 with the object of seizing the heights northwest of Beaumont. At that time it consisted of two French and two American divisions, the Thirty-third and Twenty-ninth, making the corps in numerical strength two-thirds American. Though opposed by strong German resistance the assault was successfully directed by General Claudel, and our lines were division (Hines) fought its way forward beyond the Cunel-Brielle road. Two determined assaults against the Bois de Pent de Faux were broken up, but on the third attempt the northern edge of that wood was attained. The division gained the far side of the Bois de Forest on the 11th against severe opposition.

The Eightieth division (Cronkite) on the 9th, in the face of very heavy fire, pushed forward to a short distance north of the Bois des Ognon. The division's attacks continued, and when relieved two days later it had reached a line slightly south and east of Cunel.

On the front of the First corps (Liggett) the opposition encountered on the 10th was less determined, and the Eighty-second division (Duncan) by midnight had established its line beyond Marcy, while the line of the Seventy-seventh division (Alexander) ran westward from there. On the 11th, however, the fighting was severe, yet the Eighty-second, regardless of heavy casualties, advanced to a position north of Sommerance. This town, though in the sector of the First division, was occupied by the Eighty-second to protect its own flank.

The night of October 11 our line ran from east to west roughly as follows: Molleville farm—Bois de la Cote Lemont—part of Bois de Forest—south of Cote Dame Marie—Sommerance—Grandpre.

While these operations on our First army front were in progress, the Thirtieth division of the Second corps (Read) attacked October 8 as part of the British Fourth army, aiding materially in the general advance of that army. The attack, although meeting considerable opposition, was successful, and the progress continued three days. When relieved the night of the 11th, the Thirtieth division had driven the enemy back seven miles and had reached the Selle river.

THE MACEDONIAN CALL

GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:36-16:15; Romans 15:18-21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Takes the Gospel to Other Lands.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Takes the Gospel to Europe.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Christianity Came to Europe.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Took Paul to Europe.

I. Finding an Assistant for Paul (Acts 15:35-16:5).

1. Contention over John Mark (vv. 36-41).

a. Paul's proposal (v. 36). This was to revisit the scenes of their missionary endeavor to find out what progress the believers were making in their Christian life.

b. Determination of Barnabas (v. 37). This was to take with them John Mark. Mark was Barnabas' nephew (Col. 4:10).

c. Paul's opposition (v. 38). He was suspicious of Mark because of his desertion on the first journey (Acts 13:13).

d. Their separation (vv. 39-41). Their contention was so sharp that they separated. Paul's leadership under God in the evangelization of the world presumably entitles him to a clearer understanding of Mark. Mark should have another chance, but Paul's very sternness brought him to his senses. God overruled this incident to the wider extension of the work. Barnabas took Mark and sailed to Cyprus. Paul chose Silas.

2. Finding Timothy (16:1-5).

a. The place (v. 1). It was the very place where Paul on his first journey had endured cruel stoning. The conversion of this young man may be regarded as fruitage of his testimony at that time.

b. His parentage (v. 1). His mother was a believing Jewess and his father a Greek.

c. His character (v. 2). He had a good reputation in the church at Lystra and Iconium.

d. His circumcision (v. 3). Timothy had not been circumcised, doubtless because his father was a Gentile. In order to avoid offense among the Jews, Paul circumcised him.

e. The ministry of Paul and Timothy through the cities (vv. 4, 5). They went through the cities and delivered the decrees which had been ordained at the Jerusalem council (Acts 15:19-24).

II. Forbidden to Preach the Word in Asia (16:6-8).

The inclination of Paul was to tarry in Asia Minor preaching the word, but contrary to this inclination they were hurried along. We have here a fine example of divine guidance. The Holy Spirit is just as active and faithful in closing as in opening doors.

III. The Call to Macedonia (vv. 9-12).

The time had now come for the gospel to begin its conquest of another continent. The crossing of the gospel from Asia to Europe determined the entire history of the Church.

1. The vision (v. 9). Being hemmed in on all sides, a vision was given to Paul of a man of Macedonia pleading for help. This made clear to him the meaning of the closed doors.

2. The advance (vv. 10-12). As soon as the divine way was known, they moved forward. Visions must be quickly translated into aggressive action, or they are blotted from our skies.

IV. The First Convert in Europe (vv. 13-15).

The devout people were accustomed to worship at the riverside. To a humble gathering of this kind Paul came and preached. Lydia, a business woman from Thyatira, believed his message and was baptized. The steps in her conversion are worthy of note for they are typical.

1. Attendance at the place of worship (v. 13).

2. Listened to the preaching of the word of God (vv. 13, 14). The instrument used in the conversation of sinners is the word of God (Romans 10:17).

3. Her heart was opened by the Lord (v. 14).

4. She was baptized (v. 15). Everyone whose heart the Lord opens desires to confess him in baptism.

5. Her household believed (v. 15), and immediately proffered hospitality to those who had brought blessing to them.

V. Preaching the Gospel Where Christ Was Not Named (Rom. 15:18-21). This was Paul's missionary program. As the apostle to the Gentiles, his work was to be on an independent basis.

Upon Your Knees

A marble cutter, with chisel and hammer, was changing a stone into a statue. A preached looking on, said: "I wish I could deal such clanging blows on stony hearts." The workman made answer: "Maybe you could, if you worked like me, upon your knees."—Contributed by Verta M. Naylor.

A Consistent Life

A constant life honors God and yourself.—John Timothy Stone.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Get an ounce and use as directed. Fine particles of acid skin peel off until all defects such as pimples, liver spots, tan and freckles disappear. Skin is then soft and velvety. Your face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin. To remove wrinkles use one ounce Powdered Baxolite dissolved in one-half pint with lard. At drug stores.

Jewelers in Constant

Warfare on the Crook

Other lines of business which suffer from holdups and sneak thievery might find it profitable to study the methods by which 4,500 jewelry concerns, banded together in the Jewelers' Security Alliance of the United States, are making the operations of jewelry crooks steadily more dangerous and less profitable.

The crooks have many tricks. For example, there is the fruit eater. If the jeweler does not watch him carefully, he will press a stone or ring into an apple core or a squeezed orange and throw the fruit into the street for his accomplice to pick up.

The gum chewer substitutes a false stone for a real one and sticks the latter, by means of gum, under the edge of the counter until he gets a chance to remove it without being discovered. The umbrella carrier drops valuable articles into the umbrella—and so on.

The alliance keeps its members informed about these devices, and methods for circumventing them. As a result, the value of jewelry stolen from members during 1930 was kept down to about $111,000, which is surely a remarkable showing.

Just recently the jewelry crooks have turned kidnaper. They go early in the morning to the home of a jeweler, stick a gun in his ribs, force him to their car and take him to his store, where he is made to open the safe and give up whatever articles the robbers want. This trick is new, but the alliance has already developed a most ingenious way to meet it. The crooks are smart, but the alliance experts appear to be just a shade smarter.—Frank A. Fall, in the Outlook and Independent.

Too Much Noise

Gerald C. Winthrop, of the New York noise abatement commission, said in an interview:

"A haggard woman went into a radio supply shop the other day.

"You keep everything for radio here, don't you?" she said to a salesman.

"Everything, madam," the salesman told her.

"Then," said the woman, "let me have an ax."

Only Temporary Darkness

A Denver man of twenty-three years was wearied of life. He wrote a 20-page death note and went to a vacant lot to kill himself. He placed a pistol to his temple and pulled the trigger. A few minutes later passers-by found his body sprawled in the lot, the pistol beside him. When police arrived he was sitting up. The pistol had failed to fire, but he had fainted at the click of the trigger.

Scholarships for Jews

Young Jewish scholars from America will be beneficiaries of 17 new scholarships founded at the Hebrew university in Jerusalem, given by benefactors in the United States. The awards will be made on the basis of competitive examinations, which will be held at the beginning of the fall semester.

That's a Lot

"Did you call up that man about that unpaid bill?"

"Yes, sir."

"Any results?"

"Excellent results, sir. He said he was worrying about it."—Kansas City Star.

Doesn't Cupid ever tire of the monotony of it?

WOMEN: watch your BOWELS

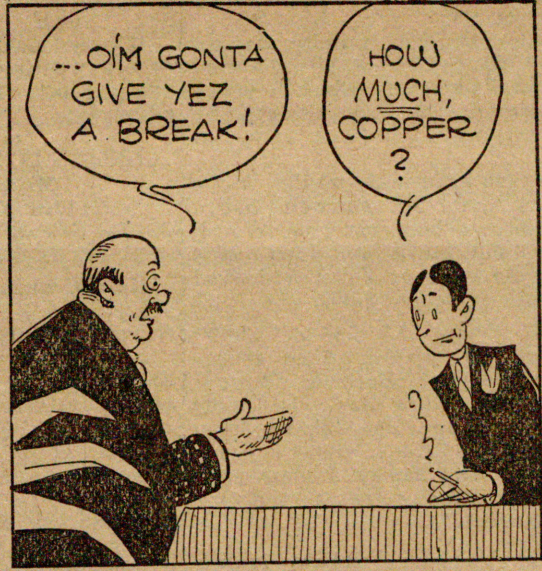

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

When you're a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all drug stores keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

Southwest Highway

Meeting at Gibson

City, October 8th

 pitality of Gibson City, "The Town With a Smile", will be displayed in a larger measure than ever next Thursday.

Many meetings of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce have been held since the inception of the idea by its president, Dr. W. R. Schussler of Chicago, several years ago, but none have been held in this territory and none in cities as large as Gibson City and the local citizens are determined that the Gibson City meeting will be the biggest and best of them all.

Besides the individual members of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce and the citizens generally of the towns interested, special invitations have been extended to congressmen, state, city and Cook county officials:

Hon. Anton W. Cermak, Mayor of Chicago; Hon. Victor J. Miller, Mayor of St. Louis; Hon. O. W. Smith, Mayor of Decatur; Chas. M. Hayes, President Chicago Motor Club; Hon. Frank T. Sheets, Chief Highway Engineer, Springfield; Hon. H. H. Cleveland, Director Highway Dept., Springfield.

Mokena Sewer

Knocked Out

By Judge Ruehl

to cite the case of the City of Chicago vs. Jerome, 301 Ill. page 589 on page 591 and the authorities therein cited. The language used in that case, and the cases therein cited, is clear and explicit.

In my opinion the court would not be justified in entering an order as suggested by the attorneys for petitioner. Such an order would be void. On final hearing of completion and acceptance objections could be successfully made that the improvement constructed is not the improvement provided for by the ordinance.

So I am still of the opinion that the ordinance in question is unreasonable and oppressive and that the court could not, under the law, order the laterals in the streets in question eliminated and the roll recast.

For those reasons I will instruct the clerk to enter an order sustaining the objections and dismissing the petition.

Information concerning the judge's decision was given out Monday morning by Edward R. Nadelhoffer, attorney for over 100 Mokena property owners. The Rock Island railroad was represented in the case by Snapp, Heise and Snapp, while the Catholic Bishop of Chicago, who has Mokena church property in his name, was represented by attorney John Wellnitz.

As in his previous decision, Judge Ruehl said that he thought the sewer ordinance to be "unreasonable and oppressive", giving as his reason the fact that approximately one-third of the territory included in the proposed project was pasture land or used for general farming purposes. However, it is shown on paper to be subdivided into lots, there are no streets, sidewalks, or any other such improvements. He said that this type of land would not be improved or benefited by the construction of the sewer.

The judge pointed out in his first decision last May that there was no demand on the market for the lots in question. The property could not be assessed for the local improvement unless it was benefited by a present or assured future use.

It was proposed by the petitioners after the dismissal order was vacated last May by Judge Ruehl, that the assessment on the subdivision in question be decreased. The court did not agree to this, and the petitioners then proposed to eliminate the lateral sewers running thru the subdivision entirely.

The ordinance provided for a sewage system to cost $70,898.10.

It was pointed out by attorneys for the objectors that the village had only 526 inhabitants, and the sewer system was too elaborate for the needs of the village. The village has less business now than in 1878, they stated in the course of arguments to show that Mokena was declining instead of going forward.

Tag Day For the Morning Star Mission

 At Mokena, Oct. 10

The second annual tag day for the Morning Star Mission, 608 North Collins Street, Joliet, will be observed at Mokena on Saturday, October 10th. Last year was the first time a tag day for the purpose of raising funds for the carrying on of the work of the mission and approximately $5,000 was raised.

This year it is believed there will be a greater demand than ever on Superintendent McCarthy and an effort will be made by the taggers to raise even a larger amount in Will County to meet the unemployment situation.

During the past month two hundred and thirty-seven free meals were provided for those destitute, according to the report of Superintendent McCarthy. During the same period conversions numbered 34, with 100 copies of the gospel and 10 New Testaments given out.

Superintendent McCarthy made 23 visits to the jail and police court during the month and provided transportation for three persons, two girls 18 and 19 years of age, and one boy 15 years of age, runaways who had been picked up by the Joliet police. Fifteen families were supplied with groceries and milk.

JUNIOR GARDEN CLUB

By Fern Fulton
 On Saturday September 26, 1931 the Junior Garden Club of Tinley Park took a jolly ride to Pilcher Park, Joliet. When we got there we went through the Conservatory and saw very many different kinds of cacti plants. Some of these were in blossom.

Outside the conservatory we saw a large star made of all different kinds of flowers of which a young man, working his way through the University received first prize of $50.

We then returned to the camp grounds where Mr. Maxwell had a lovely fire to help warm us. We all enjoyed our lunch and then Mrs. Esther Arbeiter of Joliet addressed the Junior Garden Clubs.

Rose Chapter Junior of Joliet gave a little playlet, other groups sang. The Little Bachelor Buttons were cute in little blue cloth suits with green caps. The Johnny Jump Up's sang Joyce Kilmer's song, "Trees." The Tinley Juniors sang The Tree Planting song to the tune of "America."

They also joined Joliet Juniors in singing a flower song.

The different groups were all treated to marshmallows which were toasted in the bonfire.

We are very grateful to Mr. Rick for the use of the truck and to Mr. Moss for acting as chauffeur.

The closed season for hen pheasants expired September 16, and due to the fact the legislature neglected to give these birds protection the state Department of Conservation is without legal authority to make arrests of hunters killing these birds.

Attorney A. H. Krusemark addressed the meeting and outlined the fact that hunters can be arrested for trespassing and that a very heavy fine can be imposed even if no fine can be assessed for shooting hen pheasants. He also gave an outline of the Wisconsin law which makes it possible for farms to be designated as state game preserves. The state stocks these farms and furnishes protection and the farmer may charge a fee from any hunters he allows to hunt on his farm.

Assistant game warden, Chester Melvin of Peotone also gave a number of good pointers.

Farmers cited many instances of the ruthless slaughter of chickens by hunters and killing of live stock.

The farmers passed a resolution that the Wisconsin law be advocated for adoption by Illinois.

The News-Bulletin endorses the action of the Eastern Will County farmers and urges all the farmers to join this organization and work with them for law and order and just game laws.

The Eastern Will County Game and Protective Association at their meeting Friday night elected the following officers:
 President—Wm. C. Bettenhausen.
